Senior executives and personal liability - minimising your risk in the James Hardie aftermath

The recent decision in ASIC v MacDonald (No 11) [2009] NSWSC 287 has significant implications for directors, chief executive officers, company secretaries, in-house counsel and chief financial officers.

In particular, the case highlights the extensive and onerous duties of senior executives. In this seminar, we will:

- examine the key duties and obligations of senior company executives
- highlight some major areas of risk facing senior executives, particularly those arising from the MacDonald case
- explain how senior executives can mitigate and manage these risks
